To Whom It May Concern

I am very pleased and privileged to be able to provide this recommendation letter for Feven Beletse, who worked as a Public Health Officer at Edagahamus Community Hospital for the past one year. As Medical Director at the hospital, I have had the opportunity to observe Feven work on a daily basis, and she has done an exemplary job ensuring quality health care provision at the hospital.

Her interpersonal skills allow her to communicate effectively with all our patients. It has been a weight off my shoulders knowing that I can trust Feven to provide efficient care to each individual who came to her office seeking health services.

Beyond her routine duties, Feven took a particular interest in the wellbeing of our most vulnerable patients. She regularly consulted with mentally ill pregnant women at the hospital, offering them the counsel and continuity of care that this group so often lacks in our setting. I also observed her advocate on behalf of women with limb loss, ensuring they were given priority during the long queues associated with postpartum follow-up visits, rather than being made to wait alongside patients with no mobility difficulties. To extend our postpartum vaccination coverage, she organized a system in which delegated nurses would travel to administer vaccinations directly in mothers' homes, reaching women who would otherwise have struggled to return to the hospital after delivery.

I am also aware that Feven extended this same commitment beyond our hospital, serving as a delegate for the Eritrean Union of Women and Youth in her community. In that capacity, she advocated for individuals living with mental illness who are often kept hidden at home by their families because of stigma, working to bring greater awareness and support to a population that is too easily overlooked.

As a person, Ms. Feven was industrious, responsible, and enthusiastic in health-related research. Her firm understanding of primary health care, combined with her strong communication skills and her advocacy for underserved patients, set the example in my office for how to help our community attain optimum health care. Therefore, for anybody looking for a fellow student researcher capable of implementing evidence-based research and driving meaningful change in inclusive policy, Ms. Feven is the right candidate, and I take this opportunity to wish her all the best in her future endeavors.

Please do not hesitate to contact me for any further information.

Yours sincerely,

Dr Kifleyesus Tedla
